To the Voters of the Eighth Congressional District:

After a careful survey of the situation in the Eighth Congressional District; I am persuaded that the collective sentiment of the democratic voters in the majority of the counties composing the district is favorable to my candidacy for Representative. Otherwise, I should not feel justified in announcing myself as a candidate for a position carrying with it such

It is my wish that selection of the nominee for the position be made by a primary election, held at a time when every party voter in the district shall have opportunity to register his free and voluntary choice.

After the most demoralizing war the world has ever known, we are upon a period of re-adjustment, and it will be my highest ambition, in or out of Congress, to support unflinchingly the man, who more than any of all the great men among our allies, has held the torch of liberty for a struggling world.
